" A simple utility that takes a few seconds to evaluate the quality of a connection Simple and straight-forward application that is sure to make your life easier 1 star : " I like Conntester but it doesn't work on Windows Vista. " I like Conntester but it doesn't work on Windows Vista. First it disables the desktop icon and gives you a message that the application can't be found after the installation. However, this is not a bug at all, as I tried to bring up the app and it just failed to start. I tried removing the app and reinstalling it several times, but it didn't work. I even tried to install the version installed in the SourceForge site but it didn't work. The workarounds I found were to change the icon and change the application name. Update: I reinstalled and removed all of my system registry entries with CCleaner and Windows Update and it fixed the problem. 3 stars : " I have been using Conntester for a long time now. " I have been using Conntester for a long time now. I use it when I am on the go, maybe driving from one place to another and I feel like I am lagging. The free program lets you keep track of the quality of your connection. After all, poor connections do not only have a negative impact on businesses, but can give a lot of headaches for the average users as well, especially if they work from home and need to get in touch with associates, colleagues, managers or clients. The GUI consists of a relatively small window that is fixed in the lower right area of your desktop, right on top of the System Tray. Once accessed, the tool displays the current connection status in real time with data as well as a nifty graphic. More precisely, the app shows you the packet losses – in percentages – as well as the connection delay in milliseconds. At the same time, the utility displays the ping loss, the last pin as well as the mean ping of your connection, which may help determine whether you receive what your Internet contract stipulates. A user-friendly utility to help you monitor the quality of your connection As you probably hinted from the interface, the application measures the connection quality every 5 minutes by default. Then again, if you prefer to configure other intervals for the pings and their timeout, you can probably do that by editing the INI file. Regardless of whether you want to make sure that you are getting what you are paying for or are trying to find the possible causes behind your weak Internet connection, Conntester might be worth a try.
