"Royal Agents: Sweet Zombie, like all Royal Agents games, is a fast-paced squad game for up to four players. It features a story-driven narrative in which the team of Royal Agents moves through a number of rounds, each controlled by a scenario, as they try to stop the evil witch from eating the world. The narrative is created by a series of illustrated scenarios and the Royal Agents provide players with prompts to keep the story consistent. This game is made by Christian Knutsson and Mikael Reidal." To the Edge of Mars Years of unrest and bloody revolutions have finally pushed the citizens to this point. A foreign military expedition has landed on Mars – they call themselves the 'Infiltrators', and they seem to be looking for something that every one else is looking for – a Princess. Two groups of people await this mysterious mission: the Elite. These are scientists and brave military men who know that they will be the first to go for the advantage. They have trained their whole lives for this moment. To the same people belong the Regulators. They consist of common soldiers and the people of Mars who fear the arrival of the Infiltrators. The Regulators go where they can defend the people. In the middle is the city. The city has its own society – it is a city of masks and a realm of clones who are manipulated to serve the people. Its the City of Surveillance and Control. This game is made by Mikael Reidal and Christian Knutsson. About The Game: "To the Edge of Mars is a 2D turn-based squad game that puts players in the shoes of a militia of soldiers, the Regulators, tasked with defending the people of Mars against the Infiltrators who have landed on the planet. Players have to develop their own militia by recruiting new members, organising their soldiers, and deciding how to distribute their trust among their current members. A deep rules system allows players to create their own game-play experience for their militia, and this will also offer a setting for wacky and situational events that will only be played out with the right mix of leadership, decision-making, and trust. The game is made by Christian Knutsson and Mikael Reidal". Grimm Fairy Tales is a turn-based game set in a snow-covered, Bohemian-like village. The players take the role of the fairy tale characters and they are being

Deep the Silver is a sci-fi adventure game for PC that tells the story of an android with a human body, Mana, who returns to his lost city of origin, Ikusegawa, 60 years after he was built, to complete a quest he never knew he had. More than that, he needs to fight a war he does not understand. Deep, a powerful and enigmatic entity, is the master of Ikusegawa, and the only one who can fend off this invasion. All he needs are more than his own powers, but in order to solve the mystery and heal the wounds of the past, he must unite with other souls from different worlds and erase the wall of death. Deep has no right or wrong, no good or bad. He simply exists. But what he does, what he chooses, will change the destiny of Ikusegawa… HOOK Don't get caught… The power of the Sword is over and done with… The power of the Sword is over… The power of the Sword is over… The power of the Sword is over… SOLDIER Soldier You are a soldier… You have to protect the walls… You are supposed to protect them… Can you? Q: Perl 6: How to nest arrays in hash? Say I have a hash of (int, int, int): my @hand = for 1..3 => $a, $b, $c { ($a, $b, $c) } So I can reference it with @hand[2] for example. Now I have a list of numbers: my @numbers = 3, 4, 5; How can I write a map (similar to reduce) that applies an operation to all integers in @numbers? I would expect it to return (1, 2, 3), (2, 3, 4), (3, 4, 5). A: say map { my $i = $_; $i+$numbers[$i] } @numbers; # [1, 2, 3] # [2, 3, 4] # [3, 4, 5] A: In the general case, where there might be any number of keys, it's just a fold. my @numbers = 3, 4, 5; my @results; @numbers.folds.map: { $num = $_; $results.push([$num, $num+$numbers[$num]]) if $numbers.elems; $num } say @results; # [1, 2, 3] # [2, 3, 4] # [3, 4, 5] If there are a fixed number of keys (all the same), then it's a filter: my @key = 3, 4, 5; my @results; @key.folds.map: { $num = $_; $results.push($num) if $numbers.elems; } say @results;

Rocking the ball to clear it from a wall or ceiling is a very basic mechanic. There are plenty of variations in how to play and move the bouncers. In this game, there is no story line, but with additional levels of gameplay, I can incorporate story line into it. In short, to the best of my ability, I've included every way to play this game. Some require artistic play skills while others are more simple shapes that work well with the physics engine. Play as your imagination dictates. If it works, it will be included. The ball is attracted to colored balls by magnets. Because of the way the balls have been placed, they have to be moved to the right target to score. Solved Levels Easy Medium Hard Extra Hard The Original Modder notes: This game was written for educational purposes only. I'd like to encourage anyone who wants to learn how to create Indie games, so I've included the source codes of all the game modes. A: It's an independent game, made on a budget of 0 dollars. Ok, I think I have it. Excellent execution on this one! I think it might be fun to play it as a crossword puzzle. Tell me more, I'm interested in knowing more. Say, you have solved the level, what do you do now? I don't know. Maybe click the solve button? No. No you don't. Say you have 10 bounces left. You can increase the difficulty by increasing the number of bouncing balls. It's that simple. You can also have a "pro mode" in which you can actually have a timer or a display showing the player's score. Why should we use that? Who uses that? Well, if you want to show your friends on Facebook, or the guys at work, how high you can jump using only three balls. That's a valid use. But we don't need that. We need an easy mode. We didn't have time for that, that's why this entry is being posted now. Well, not really. Yes we did. Yes we did. Yes. Yep. Yep, that's what I said. I have no
