| TODAY ON SUNDAY Memo to Senators: Don't go fishing for more reasons to deny the president his appointment to replace Antonin Scalia: It would mean a president who's not serious about doing what he says he'll do. -- The Real Leadership Summit: How to be informed about politics and policy without being a jerk. -- It's Good to Be News "The country does need to have a conversation about race," said President Obama in an interview with the Associated Press. Only if you're the president of the United States and you feel compelled to say such a thing. It's all a polite way of admitting that the president and his aides have failed to make progress on race relations. The mainstream media has its own role here. It's a role of distraction. These pundits have never had any interest in "a conversation about race," so they don't ask anything meaningful to really get people to open up. If you're the president

And we do not understand why they call it a Tourist Drive! Pics and video will be posted on FB. Vomiting into a plastic bag and driving is not safe, but its cheap! A Road, most people's information is that it is the safest form of transport. While mostly true, there are some facts about roads that remain a mystery to us. Here's why travelling by Road is not as safe as believed: 1. Roads have limited visibility Roads are very congested due to increasing population. Motorists become aware of a road only when they are close to the same. So, it becomes difficult for them to estimate their distance till the road or for a driver of the vehicle they are in to estimate the distance of their vehicle to the vehicle in front of him. The situation becomes worse when the visibility is bad due to heavy rainfall or mist. Also, in monsoon due to water logging of the roads, one cannot see very far ahead. Hence, drivers become more cautious. 2. Roads are bugged Roads are bugged almost everywhere. Private vehicles are caught red-handed many a times doing radio talks or chatting. There is even the odd video wherein one can hear the drivers talking over the telephone. This can be scary.
