Basically, you just mind your own business, opening tabs like before, and this extension adds them to specific groups according to the domains they come from. When it comes to adjusting some settings to your liking, you can enable or disable alphabetic sorting, automatic grouping and sub-domain filtering.

What's New In Mark Tab Manager?

The Mark tab manager is an easy to use Firefox addon that automatically groups tabs according to the domains they are coming from. The Google Chrome browser has gained a lot of popularity over the last few years. In fact, it has become a very popular alternative to Internet Explorer and Firefox. Some people might feel that it is just another Google product and there is nothing new about it, but those are just ignorant individuals with an attitude. In the last five years or so, Google has managed to make various improvements to it which are sure to keep you coming back for more. One such addition to Google Chrome is the new tab clustering feature. Previously you had to switch to a tab that was not in use to put a new one in its place, but now you can do the same by simply clicking on the previous button. The best part is that all your open tabs are grouped by their names. Furthermore, if you need to open a new tab and switch to it immediately, you do not have to leave the current tab, as the new tab comes up automatically. Auto tab closing and grouping Another great addition to the browser is the auto tab closing feature, so that all the tabs open in a page will close once the page is no longer needed. You can also disable this feature on a per-page basis, and that is also a very handy option to have, as you do not have to bother with closing tabs that are less relevant to your browsing preferences. Furthermore, it is now possible to group your tab into various sections or categories on your own. There is no need to be an expert in computing to be able to configure this feature. With just a few clicks, you can group your tabs according to various criteria including:

- The domain name
- The size of the tab
- The site that is linking to the tab
- The URL of the tab
- The page that is currently loading in the tab

How to enable auto tab closing in Google Chrome: Go to the Help/Tools menu, and then select the option 'Tabs' to reach the newly launched settings page. Click on 'Manage Tabs', and click on 'Group Tabs by Domain'. By default, Google
