The moon is dark and cold. it seems that is the destiny. it is sad from time to time, but this is the destiny that I have and this is all I have in this world. It is a shame when we decided to leave for this world,

In fact, Facebook uses your pictures as an effective way to show you how you're connected to your friends. But, did you know that you can use Facebook to post, search and tag your pictures? On the surface, Facebook's photo-tagging feature is nothing more than an easy way to relate to your friends and family. Now, with a few tricks, you can use your Facebook profile to further classify your pictures — which makes it even more useful. Here's how to get the most out of your profile picture. 1. Start with the basic. After you've uploaded your favorite picture, you'll be prompted to add at least three tags to it. (If you're wondering where your pictures go if you don't tag them, they're displayed on a Web page you can access through Facebook. We won't get into it now.) To tag a picture, you'll first have to click on a thumbnail of the picture you want to tag. You'll then be taken to a page where you can type up to six words to describe the picture. Once you click on "Post," the picture will be shared through your network of friends. 2. Add your passion. While your friends may be willing to tag your friends' and family's photo with "Nice!" or "Family Reunion," you can do better. Search out related photographs on your own by typing in the words that best describe your picture. Just be sure to limit the search to your Facebook friends. You can even try posting the search term to get a large number of potential matches. 3. Click 'Like,' but don't tag. We often notice a crowd of our friends uploading the same photo. If you see this, you're not alone; and there's a reason you're all doing it. All you have to do is open up the Facebook mobile photo stream, go to the individual picture you want to share, and click the "Like" 6d1f23a050
